Renee knows that each and every client's case is unique. An experienced trial attorney with a history of advocacy for her clients in the areas of personal injury, premises liability, worker's compensation and criminal defense, she emphasizes understanding each client's goals and objectives.

Renee encourages regular personal contact with her clients, and feels everyone deserves an attorney who will zealously fight for their equitable compensation for pain and suffering, medical bills, loss of wages, and other losses associated with their accident claim. Renee has also had impressive results in alternative dispute resolution through pretrial negotiation and mediation.

Prior to joining JGL, Renee practiced for a number of years in Maryland and District of Columbia, where she represented plaintiffs in personal injury, premises liability, and workers' compensation matters.

She also is experienced in insurance defense work. Renee's unique experience in both plaintiff and defense litigation allows her to analyze and evaluate each case strategically identifying the path to the greatest award, be it through settlement or trial.

While in law school, Renee served as President of the Alternative Dispute Resolution Society, Member of National Trial Advocacy Team, Thurgood Marshall Inn of Court, Student Senate, and member of the Communications Law Journal.
