"I'm highly responsive and available to my clients during a stressful time in their lives. I want them to feel comfortable and understand the process as we work together to achieve their goals."

Clients facing thorny family law matters turn to Anne Grover for compassionate and aggressive representation in a wide variety of cases, including separation and divorce, child custody disputes, contempt and enforcement proceedings, drafting and negotiating prenuptial agreements, and obtaining protective orders. But no matter how busy her day, the core of Anne's practice is talking to her clients, listening to their concerns and desired outcomes, and making sure they understand every step of the process as she helps them navigate the legal system.

As a principal in Joseph, Greenwald & Laake's Family Law practice, Anne has represented clients throughout Maryland, as well as in interstate jurisdictional matters and appeals. She is skilled as both a negotiator and a litigator, and brings a sophisticated understanding of financial and tax issues to her analysis of her clients' needs. Anne is able to think on her feet, calculate tax and income amounts on the fly, and keep strategy in the forefront of her representation. She most enjoys complex business valuations, determining the income of spouses who try to hide money or assets, and navigating difficult jurisdictional issues.

Among her recent victories, Anne was able to obtain a judgment where the court found a spouse could not shirk his support duties to his wife and family and awarded support after imputing an income to him; successfully defended an appeal of a protective order she obtained on behalf of a client and his children; and obtained an interim order guaranteeing that a client and her children received substantial support while awaiting a divorce trial.
