"Well before my first day of law school, I knew I wanted to be a business attorney. For me, there is no greater feeling of satisfaction than seeing my client's business thrive and knowing that I am part of that success."

For nearly 30 years, Jerry Miller has helped clients large and small tackle the legal challenges of owning and operating a business, from choosing the right corporate structure and working out a first lease, to advising seasoned entrepreneurs on a wide variety of complex business issues and, ultimately, helping clients transition their business to a succeeding generation of ownership.

A principal in Joseph, Greenwald & Laake's Business Services Group, Jerry is more than just a lawyer to the clients he represents. He's a confidant and advisor with acute business acumen and a knack for helping his clients identify and resolve business problems before they can become legal problems.

It's that proactive and hands-on service that has kept many of Jerry's clients with him for years. In addition to advising clients on a wide range of business issues, including business formation and choice of entity, corporate tax, and employment contracts & related issues. Jerry has extensive experience in advising his clients on commercial real estate matters including leases and the purchase and sale of real estate.
