

Maryland Collaborative Divorce Attorneys

If you and your spouse each have a realistic outlook, or are willing to find a compromise through discussion and negotiation, a collaborative divorce plan is often quicker and less expensive than a protracted court battle. This process should create a fair and functional plan for your family during and after a divorce.

What is Collaborative Divorce?

Collaborative divorce is a voluntary process that creates a legally binding divorce plan which places the needs of the children and their routines uppermost in its design. This non-contentious approach can take some time but promises to ensure that the best compromise is reached.

Coordinating with Collaborative Professionals

It is important that each of you be represented by a collaborative divorce professional. You will discuss and resolve issues like individual personal growth, financial concerns, family matters, co-parenting issues, and the difficulties of daily living. Often, outside professionals are invited into the process to give direction on mental and emotional support, property division, and family finances.

The Legal Impact of the Collaborative Divorce Process

A Collaborative Divorce should provide a sensible compromise for all parties as you dissolve the marriage, and it is legally binding. It should create a rational path forward for all parties.

The Benefits of a Collaborative Divorce

Collaborative Divorce minimizes conflict and reduces stress for the divorcing couple and also, for the children. The process ensures the physical, mental, and emotional health of the family members moving forward. Work with an experienced Maryland collaborative divorce attorney. What matters to you, matters to us.
